

8th of April 2025

Supporting letter for Mr. Lokesh Goud Dabbi

To whom it may concern

It is my pleasure to support Mr. Lokesh Goud Dabbi, a current student in our English taught Master program "Organic Agriculture and Food Systems at the University of Hohenheim, Stuttgart, Germany. Mr. Dabbi is now studying within his 4th semester. He is known to me as a dedicated and ambitious international student from India.

Lokesh informed us, that he has recently been invited by the President of the United Nations Economic and Social Council to participate in the UN ECOSOC Youth Forum 2025 in New York, where he will proudly represent INDIA through YOUNGO, the official children and youth constituency of the UNFCCC. This invitation reflects his consistent engagement in high-impact youth-led global climate and development platforms.

Lokesh is following ambitiously his studies and achieved 54 credits. He organized his Master Thesis topic under the supervision of one of the institutes of the Agricultural Faculty at Hohenheim University. He informed us that he successfully achieved a competitive scholarship from BMZ and GIZ, supported by the ATSAF Academy and plans to conduct his Master's thesis research from April to September 2025. His thesis focuses on regenerative agriculture and agroecological approaches to climate-resilient farming systems in India.

I herewith like to support Lokesh in his current plan to represent India on the UN ECOSOC Youth Forum in New York. Kind regards

UNIVERSITÄT HOHENHEIM
Fakultät Agrarwissenschaften
70593 Stuttgart

Kerstin Hoffbauer, Coordinator Master Programs